Welcome to NEC!

I am thrilled to share New England Conservatory's 2023-24 concert season—a celebration of the power of music to connect and inspire one another.

Whether you are seated in one of our concert halls or watching online, we hope you are uplifted by the performances of our students, faculty, and guest artists.

Above all, we thank you for your support of our students as they cultivate their artistry and contribute to the world through music.

Joan Tower
(b. 1938)

Sequoia (1981)

Hector Berlioz
(1803–1869)

Overture to Benvenuto Cellini, op. 23

Intermission

Ludwig van Beethoven
(1770–1827)

Symphony No. 3 in E-flat Major, op. 55 “Eroica”
Allegro con brio
Marcia funebre: Adagio assai
Scherzo: Allegro vivace
Finale: Allegro molto – Poco andante – Presto

Joan Tower turned eighty-five earlier this month. A pioneering woman composer, her success in the late 1970's and 1980's heralded a new era of acceptance for women composers. She is the first woman recipient of the prestigious Grawemeyer Award for Music and her works have been performed all over the world. Sequoia is her first orchestra work. About it, she writes:

I think most composers would have to admit that they live, to various degrees, in the sound-worlds of other composers both old and new, and that what they consciously or unconsciously take from them enables them to discover what they themselves are interested in. Long ago, I recognized Beethoven as someone bound to enter my work at some point, because for many years I had been intimately involved in both his piano music and chamber music as a pianist. Even though my own music does not sound like Beethoven's in any obvious way, in it there is a basic idea at work which came from him. This is something I call the "balancing" of musical energies.

In Sequoia, that concept is not only very much present in the score but it actually led to the title (which is meant in an abstract rather than a pictorial sense). What fascinated me about sequoias, those giant California redwood trees, was the balancing act nature had achieved in giving them such great height.

Cast in three continuous movements (fast, slow, fast), Sequoia opens with a long-held pedalpoint on G with percussion punctuations. Around this central G (finally arrived at in a solo-trumpet note), there begins a fanning-out (first high, then low), on both sides of harmonies symmetrically built up or down from G. This "balancing" of registers like the branching of a tree, continues to develop into more complex settings, as the "branches" start to grow sub-branches. The main pedal point (or trunk, to continue the analogy) on G eventually shifts, both downward and upward, thereby creating a larger balancing motion that has a longer-range movement throughout the piece. Because musical gestures are not confined only to registers and harmonies, the balancing principle permeates every facet of Sequoia - most importantly, in the areas of rhythm, tempo, dynamics, pacing, texture and instrumental color. For example, the initial movement's first two sections (connected by quick, repeated Gs in the muted trumpet) exhibit a balancing of loud dynamics with soft; of heavy and thin sound (a possible parallel: despite the enormous size of sequoias, their "leaves" - literally, needles - are miniscule, the size of thumbnail); of static (one-note) and moving harmony; of many instruments with a few; of middle-low and middle-high registers, and so on. In this score, the pacing is active and energetic, perhaps suggesting (with the exception of occasional solo instrumental passages) the power and grandeur inherent in the sequoia.

Throughout life, Ludwig van Beethoven was both a fervent believer in individual rights and someone who unapologetically curried favor with the nobility. Supremely confident in his abilities, he yearned for a world that rewarded according to those abilities, not birthright. At times he even promoted the fiction that he himself was of noble birth, changing his Dutch “van” to the “von” of German nobility. So when Napoleon Bonaparte swept through Europe at the beginning of the 19th century, Beethoven was one of many who saw him as the avatar of a new world. Inspired by the promise of a republican future, Beethoven seriously planned to move to Paris in 1803. Perhaps with the dream of meeting Napoleon, he started work on a new symphony – grander and more ambitious than anything written prior – something worthy of the title Bonaparte. In the summer of 1803, Beethoven isolated himself in the little village of Oberdöbling and set to work. Throughout its composition and right up to the preparations for its premiere, the symphony retained its title Bonaparte. Only when Napoleon declared himself emperor in May 1804, did the bitterly disillusioned composer change the title to “Sinfonia eroica, composta per festeggiare il sovvenire d’un grand’uomo” (Heroic symphony, composed to celebrate the memory of a great man). But the work itself was clearly designed as a tribute to the man who was already dominating Europe.

The scope of the hero’s life determines the size and shape of the symphony’s first movement, Allegro con brio. Beethoven’s expressive and dramatic ambitions expand the traditional three-part form of exposition, development, and recapitulation into a four-part form – exposition, development, recapitulation, and coda – in which the development and coda become equal partners with the exposition and recap. In striking innovation, they share melodic elements not found in the exposition or recap, and together are considerably longer.

The symphony begins with a simple melody in the cellos that follows the outline of the E-flat major triad – the tonic note on each of the first four downbeats. This melodic straightjacket is abruptly broken with an astonishing chromatic turn down to C-sharp. Triads and chromatic steps become essential building blocks for the entire movement, and, in some ways, the entire symphony.

The second movement, Marcia Funebre, is a meditation on a fallen hero’s life. The sotto voce opening dirge with its characteristic dotted rhythm, is placed at the beginning, center, and end of the movement, and frames two important episodes. The first, Maggiore, is a sunnier C major episode perhaps recounting great deeds and happier memories. The second, a massive fugato, begins with stoic power but culminates in a passage of unrestrained grief, the emotional climax of the movement and, arguably, the whole symphony. After the dirge returns, the music breaks into fragments – shards of melody over bass pizzicato are all that is left.

The third movement is Beethoven’s first symphonic scherzo – a form he invented by speeding up the minuet of Haydn and Mozart. What had been an elegant 18th century dance is now a breathless 19th century romp. Beethoven instructs the entire orchestra to play pianissimo for the first ninety-one measures, before erupting into a jubilant fortissimo. The trio features the three horns, outlining the E-flat major triad, just as the cellos did at the symphony's outset.

The Allegro molto finale is a complex set of variations on a theme Beethoven had used in his Creatures of Prometheus ballet and Piano Variations, op. 35. After a short, stormy introduction, a simple, skeletal theme (with a wink to the symphony's opening cello melody) first outlines E-flat major for four measures, then moves chromatically up to F. Two variations follow: for string trio and string quartet. When the winds finally appear, they have a new melody, revealing that the skeletal theme was really just a bass line (much as Berlioz superimposed two melodies in his overture). Subsequent variations include two fugatos, a virtuosic flute interlude, and an exuberant Hungarian-style dance. Halfway through the movement, as Beethoven transforms the main melody into a hymn, the tempo shifts abruptly to Poco Andante. A grand climax precedes the brilliant Presto coda.

Bear in mind that Beethoven was just thirty-two years old when he wrote this symphony, and Haydn was still alive. Beethoven's first two symphonies, while full of beautiful and original ideas, are very much within 18th century traditions. In the Eroica Symphony, Beethoven has made an enormous leap forward. He breaks fully with the past of his mentors and confidently ushers us into a brave new artistic world.

Hugh Wolff

Stanford and Norma Jean Calderwood Director of Orchestras; Chair, Orchestral Conducting

Hugh Wolff joined the New England Conservatory faculty in 2008 and has conducted a large share of NEC's orchestral concerts every year since then. He has taught graduate students in an elite training program for orchestral conductors since 2009.

Wolff has appeared with all the major American orchestras, including those of Boston, Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Cleveland. He is much in demand in Europe, where he has conducted the London Symphony, the Philharmonia, the City of Birmingham Symphony, the Orchestre National de France, Czech Philharmonic, Leipzig Gewandhaus, Munich Philharmonic, and the Bavarian and Berlin Radio Orchestras. A regular guest conductor with orchestras in Japan, Korea, Scandinavia, Canada and Australia, he is also a frequent conductor at summer festivals.

Currently Laureate Conductor of the Belgian National Orchestra, Wolff was principal conductor of the Frankfurt Radio Orchestra from 1997 to 2006 and maintains a close relationship with that ensemble. He led it on tours of Europe, Japan, and China, and at the Salzburg Festival. Wolff was principal conductor and then music director of the Saint Paul Chamber Orchestra (1988-2000), with which he recorded twenty discs and toured the United States, Europe, and Japan. Performances with the Boston Symphony have included the world premiere of Ned Rorem's Swords and Ploughshares in Symphony Hall. Wolff was music director of the New Jersey Symphony (1986-1993) and principal conductor of Chicago's Grant Park Music Festival (1994-1997). He began his professional career in 1979 as associate conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra under Mstislav Rostropovich.

Wolff's extensive discography includes the complete Beethoven symphonies with the Frankfurt Radio Orchestra and music from the baroque to the present. He has recorded or premiered works by John Adams, Stephen Albert, John Corigliano, Brett Dean, Lukas Foss, John Harbison, Aaron Jay Kernis, Edgar Meyer, Rodion Shchedrin, Bright Sheng, Michael Torke, Mark-Anthony Turnage, and Joan Tower and has collaborated on CD with Mstislav Rostropovich, Yo-Yo Ma, Steven Isserlis, Joshua Bell, Hilary Hahn, Dawn Upshaw, Jennifer Larmore, Jean-Yves Thibaudet, and jazz guitarist John Scofield. Three times nominated for a Grammy Award, Wolff won the 2001 Cannes Classical Award.

A graduate of Harvard College, Wolff studied piano with George Crumb, Leon Fleisher and Leonard Shure, composition with Leon Kirchner and Olivier Messiaen, and conducting with Charles Bruck. In 1985, Wolff was awarded one of the first Seaver/ National Endowment for the Arts Conducting Prizes.

A gift from the Calderwood Charitable Foundation endowed the Stanford and Norma Jean Calderwood Director of Orchestras chair now occupied by Hugh Wolff.

He and his wife, harpist and radio journalist Judith Kogan, have three sons.
