Tuesday Night New Music was founded in the early 90s by Lee Hyla.

It is a student-run, faculty-supervised concert series that offers the opportunity to hear music by the next generation of composers: current New England Conservatory composition students.

This year, the series is directed by Minoo Dixon and Changjin Ha, under the supervision of composition chair Michael Gandolfi.

Kim  Aurora

The aurora is a breathtaking natural phenomenon that occurs when charged particles from the sun interact with Earth’s magnetic field. The three videos of shimmering light and color aurora have captivated my imagination. The harp’s delicate and intricate arpeggios, glissandos and rich chords are ideal for expressing the sense of movement and fluidity that characterizes the dance-like quality of the aurora.

The first movement, “Espressivo,” begins with arpeggios that evoke the undulating movement of the aurora. I described the awe-inspiring beauty of the aurora through sweeping, flowing melodies and colorful glissandos.

In the second movement, “Dolce,” I expressed a softer and more relaxed feeling, reminiscent of peaceful stillness. The harp’s delicate chords and voiced as harmonics create a sense of serenity and calm, imagining the quiet beauty of the night sky.

In the third movement, “Scintillante,” I described the twinkling and dancing lights of the aurora. The harp’s bright and shimmering tones are used to capture the vivid and colorful movements of the aurora, while its virtuosic passages reflect the dynamic and ever-changing nature of the northern lights.

Aurora is about ten minutes in duration, and was written for Shaylen Joos.

Stephenson  To Sappho (2022)

Historians will call them best friends.

Weaver of violets, chaste Sappha with a honeyed smile, words rise to my lips, but a modesty holds me back.

Weaver of violets, chaste Sappha with a honeyed smile, words rise to my lips, but a modesty holds me back.

Si tu avais eu le désir des choses nobles ou belles, et si ta langue n’avait préféré une phrase vile, la pudeur n’aurait point fait baisser tes yeux, mais tu aurais parlé selon la justice.

If you had desired noble or beautiful things, and if your tongue had not uttered a vile phrase, modesty would not have lowered your eyes, but you would have spoken with justice.

Demeure mon ami, debout et face à face… et dévoile la bienveillance qui est dans tes yeux.

Remain my friend, upright and face to face... and reveal the benevolence which is in your eyes.

J’aime la délicatesse, et pour moi l’éclat et la beauté du soleil, c’est l’amour.

I love delicacy, and for me the radiance and beauty of the sun is love.

Toi et l’Erôs, mon serviteur...

You and Eros, my servant...

Telle une douce pomme rougit à l’extrémité de la branche, à l’extrémité lointaine : les cueilleurs de fruits l’ont oubliée ou, plutôt, ils ne l’ont pas oubliée, mais ils n’ont pu l’atteindre.

Like a sweet apple blushes at the end of the branch, at the far end: the fruit pickers have forgotten it, or rather they have not forgotten it, but they could not reach it.
And you, O Dika! gird with garlands your lovely hair, braid the fennel stems with your tender hands, for the virgins with beautiful flowers are by far the first in the favour of the Blessed Ones: these turn away from young girls who are not crowned.

Of all the stars the evening is the most beautiful
Eros has bent my soul, like a wind,
Mountains twist and break
Someone will remember us. I say even in another time

We Outgrow Love Like Other Things  (2022)
This song cycle selects four poems from Emily Dickinson and two poems from Oscar Wilde to present different views from male and female poets on similar topics - love, death, and memories.

Roses and Rue

Could we dig up this long-buried treasure
Were it worth the pleasure
We never could learn love's song
We are parted too long.

Could the passionate past that is fled
Call back its dead
Could we live it all over again
Were it worth the pain!

I remember we used to meet
By an ivied seat
And you warbled each pretty word
With the air of a bird;

And your voice had a quaver in it
Just like a linnet
And shook, as the blackbird's throat
With its last big note;

And your eyes, they were green and grey
Like an April day
But lit into amethyst
When I stooped and kissed;
And your mouth, it would never smile
For a long, long while
Then it rippled all over with laughter
Five minutes after.

You were always afraid of a shower
Just like a flower:
I remember you started and ran
When the rain began.

I remember I never could catch you
For no one could match you
You had wonderful, luminous, fleet
Little wings to your feet.

I remember your hair - did I tie it?
For it always ran riot -
Like a tangled sunbeam of gold
These things are old.

I remember so well the room
And the lilac bloom
That beat at the dripping pane
In the warm June rain;

And the colour of your gown
It was amber-brown
And two yellow satin bows
From your shoulders rose.

And the handkerchief of French lace
Which you held to your face
Had a small tear left a stain?
Or was it the rain?

On your hand as it waved adieu
There were veins of blue
In your voice as it said good-bye
Was a petulant cry.

‘You have only wasted your life.’
(Ah, that was the knife!)
When I rushed through the garden gate
It was all too late.

Could we live it over again
Were it worth the pain
Could the passionate past that is fled
Call back its dead!
Well, if my heart must break
Dear love, for your sake
It will break in music, I know
Poets' hearts break so.

But strange that I was not told
That the brain can hold
In a tiny ivory cell
God's heaven and hell.

Oscar Wilde

Nobody Knows This Little Rose

Nobody knows this little Rose
It might a pilgrim be
Did I not take it from the ways
And lift it up to thee.
Only a Bee will miss it
Only a Butterfly
Hastening from far journey
On its breast to lie
Only a Bird will wonder
Only a Breeze will sigh
Ah Little Rose – how easy
For such as thee to die!

Emily Dickinson

I Held a Jewel in My Fingers

I held a Jewel in my fingers
And went to sleep
The day was warm, and winds were prosy
I said "'Twill keep"
I woke—and chid my honest fingers
The Gem was gone
And now, an Amethyst remembrance
Is all I own.

Emily Dickinson

We Outgrow Love Like Other Things

We outgrow love like other things
And put it in the drawer
Till it an antique fashion shows
Like costumes grandisires wore

Emily Dickinson

Her Voice

Ah! can it be
We have lived our lives in a land of dreams!
How sad it seems.
Sweet, there is nothing left to say
But this, that love is never lost
Keen winter stabs the breasts of May
Whose crimson roses burst his frost
Ships tempest-tossed
Will find a harbour in some bay
And so we may.

And there is nothing left to do
But to kiss once again, and part
Nay, there is nothing we should rue
I have my beauty; you your Art
Nay, do not start
One world was not enough for two
Like me and you.

(excerpt) Oscar Wilde

Heart, we will forget him!

Heart, we will forget him!
You and I, to-night!
You may forget the warmth he gave
I will forget the light.

When you have done, pray tell me
That I my thoughts may dim;
Haste! Lest while you’re lagging
I may remember him!

Emily Dickinson

With a flower

When roses cease to bloom, dear,
And voices are done
When bumble-bees in solemn flight
Have passed beyond the sun…

Yan  An Ancient Idyllic Valley
The title, An Ancient Chinese Idyllic Valley, originated from the literary work Peach Blossom Spring Story by a famous poet in the Eastern Jin Dynasty. In the original text, a man from Wuling, who earned his living by fishing, happened to encounter a peach blossom forest while rowing, but after passing through he sees an isolated world of great beauty. In that world, there is vast land, filled with fertile fields and beautiful ponds. The field roads extend in all directions, and one hears relentless sounds of chickens and dogs. People work and cultivate in the fields, and men, women and children are happy. Finally, the fisherman leaves this world, tells people about the existence of such a paradise, but those who seek it can no longer see this mysterious and peaceful world.

I was inspired by this literary work and used music to interpret the essence of the story from different dimensions. I not only express the whole storyline in a narrative manner but also use music to invoke imagination, and depict the mountains, forests, and beasts, and all the sounds of this peaceful and dynamic world. The harmonic language consists of a combination of Chinese pentatonic scale and western scales. As a work for piano, the composition contains some unconventional motives, and tries to present the beautiful mood and unique aesthetic value of the far-east.

Lanning  Three American Quartets (2022)
Three American Quartets is a musical exploration of the myths and realities of the American West.

Automospheres is a string quartet that explores the theme of internal struggle and the wide, expansive palette of opportunity that awaits the motivated individual. Like the word ‘Automospheres’ itself, the piece is a sort of ‘portmanteau’ of the fiddle and the classical traditions.

Ghost Tree is a song about an old western legend about the spirit of an old outlaw kickin’ ranger whose soul lives on inside a twisted old tree in the desert expanse.

on the outside i’m hootin,’ on the inside i’m hollerin,’ or Hoedown, explores the duality of the American dream and the external chaos of the life it so often finds itself bound to. Do we find comfort in that which is old, tried and true, or do we look forward to the new and the bold?

– Mathew Lanning

Lian  String Quartet No. 1 (2022)
String Quartet features several progressive textural unfurlings and contractions. Beginning with a sustained and dissonant sound, the note D is heard at the center of the whole movement. The set class [0123] appears throughout the movement in important spots. A slow fugue follows the opening section. It is a four-part fugue with a slow and unchanged path. A complex texture and a very dense sound results. The theme, pitch classes (03018), is used throughout the movement in different forms. After that, the [0123] reappears as the viola and cello accompany the violins. It is the same theme from the slow fugue, but in a faster tempo. After that the music becomes fast and aggressive but still employs the same fugal theme. The set class [0123] reappears in heavy chords in the following section. This leads into a slow section that recalls the texture of the beginning, but in a different transposition. It has a light and melodic character. The recapitulation repeats the theme of the slow fugue. It starts from the first note of the theme and then goes backward after reaching the midpoint. Finally, the opening texture is once more recalled as the movement fades away.

Butler  With Expiring Breath
Written for Kearston Gonzales, With Expiring Breath is scored for solo violin. Delicate yet haunting in tone, the work draws its name from William Faulkner’s seminal novel, As I Lay Dying. Beginning with a series of sharp pizzicato notes punctuated by long, shuddering breaths of phrases, the piece evokes a disconcerting scene in As I Lay Dying in which a mother lies in her deathbed listening to her son, just outside her window, chopping away, building something that is eventually revealed to be a coffin. The piece slowly expands and contracts before eventually reaching a sort of death rattle in which a final breath is cut short.

Markson  Peripatetic
The idea for this piece arose during the summer of 2022 at the Atlantic Music Festival. While my friends and I were discussing different music theory concepts, the idea crossed my mind of creating a piece using some form of note restriction (ie. serialism). After experimenting with different note collections, I came upon the collection of 013589 (for example, this could be E F G A C and Db). This restricts the collection of notes at any given time to six notes, until the collection shifts. The process created a fun and creative way to explore melodic contour and harmonies. As I began composing, the ideas formulated vibrant imagery of a caravan crossing the desert at sunrise and battling the harsh attributes of nature, as they wandered from one town to the next. To me, this created a narrative of a nomadic group traversing a multitude of ecosystems, all representative of the different musical motifs created and their flow from one idea to the next. Peripatetic describes one who travels from place to place – this fits the character of the narrative and the music itself, thus the name feels like a perfect fit.
