Tuesday Night New Music was founded in the early 90s by Lee Hyla.

It is a student-run, faculty-supervised concert series that offers the opportunity to hear music by the next generation of composers: current New England Conservatory composition students.

This year, the series is directed by Minoo Dixon and Changjin Ha, under the supervision of composition chair Michael Gandolfi.

Kim  Aurora

The aurora is a breathtaking natural phenomenon that occurs when charged particles from the sun interact with Earth’s magnetic field. The three videos of shimmering light and color aurora have captivated my imagination. The harp’s delicate and intricate arpeggios, glissandos and rich chords are ideal for expressing the sense of movement and fluidity that characterizes the dance-like quality of the aurora.

The first movement, “Espressivo,” begins with arpeggios that evoke the undulating movement of the aurora. I described the awe-inspiring beauty of the aurora through sweeping, flowing melodies and colorful glissandos.

In the second movement, “Dolce,” I expressed a softer and more relaxed feeling, reminiscent of peaceful stillness. The harp’s delicate chords and voiced as harmonics create a sense of serenity and calm, imagining the quiet beauty of the night sky.

In the third movement, ”Scintillante,” I described the twinkling and dancing lights of the aurora. The harp’s bright and shimmering tones are used to capture the vivid and colorful movements of the aurora, while its virtuosic passages reflect the dynamic and ever-changing nature of the northern lights.

Aurora is about ten minutes in duration, and was written for Shaylen Joos.

Stephenson  To Sappho (2022)

Historians will call them best friends.

Weaver of violets, chaste Sappha with a honeyed smile, words rise to my lips, but a modesty holds me back.

If you had desired noble or beautiful things, and if your tongue had not uttered a vile phrase, modesty would not have lowered your eyes, but you would have spoken with justice.

Remain my friend, upright and face to face... and reveal the benevolence which is in your eyes.

I love delicacy, and for me the radiance and beauty of the sun is love.

You and Eros, my servant...

Like a sweet apple blushes at the end of the branch, at the far end: the fruit pickers have forgotten it, or rather they have not forgotten it, but they could not reach it.
Et toi, ô Dika ! ceins de guirlandes ta chevelure aimable, tresse les tiges du fenouil de tes tendres mains, car les [vierges] aux belles fleurs sont de beaucoup les premières dans la faveur des Bienheureuses : celles-ci se détourneront des jeunes filles qui ne sont point couronnées.

De tous les astres le plus beau les grandes chênes
L’Erôs a ployé mon âme, comme un vent,
Des montagnes tord et brise
Se souviendra dans l’avenir de nous.

Renée Vivien

And you, O Dika! gird with garlands your lovely hair, braid the fennel stems with your tender hands, for the virgins with beautiful flowers are by far the first in the favour of the Blessed Ones: these turn away from young girls who are not crowned.

Of all the stars the evening is the most beautiful
Eros has bent my soul, like a wind,
Mountains twist and break
Someone will remember us. I say even in another time

Yan  An Ancient Idyllic Valley
The title, An Ancient Chinese Idyllic Valley, originated from the literary work Peach Blossom Spring Story by a famous poet in the Eastern Jin Dynasty. In the original text, a man from Wuling, who earned his living by fishing, happened to encounter a peach blossom forest while rowing, but after passing through he sees an isolated world of great beauty. In that world, there is vast land, filled with fertile fields and beautiful ponds. The field roads extend in all directions, and one hears relentless sounds of chickens and dogs. People work and cultivate in the fields, and men, women and children are happy. Finally, the fisherman leaves this world, tells people about the existence of such a paradise, but those who seek it can no longer see this mysterious and peaceful world.

I was inspired by this literary work and used music to interpret the essence of the story from different dimensions. I not only express the whole storyline in a narrative manner but also use music to invoke imagination, and depict the mountains, forests, and beasts, and all the sounds of this peaceful and dynamic world. The harmonic language consists of a combination of Chinese pentatonic scale and western scales. As a work for piano, the composition contains some unconventional motives, and tries to present the beautiful mood and unique aesthetic value of the far-east.

Lian  String Quartet No. 1 (2022)
String Quartet features several progressive textural unfurlings and contractions. Beginning with a sustained and dissonant sound, the note D is heard at the center of the whole movement. The set class [0123] appears throughout the movement in important spots. A slow fugue follows the opening section. It is a four-part fugue with a slow and unchanged path. A complex texture and a very dense sound results. The theme, pitch classes (03018), is used throughout the movement in different forms. After that, the [0123] reappears as the viola and cello accompany the violins. It is the same theme from the slow fugue, but in a faster tempo. After that the music becomes fast and aggressive but still employs the same fugal theme. The set class [0123] reappears in heavy chords in the following section. This leads into a slow section that recalls the texture of the beginning, but in a different transposition. It has a light and melodic character. The recapitulation repeats the theme of the slow fugue. It starts from the first note of the theme and then goes backward after reaching the midpoint. Finally, the opening texture is once more recalled as the movement fades away.
