This semester marks a significant transition for Hugh Wolff, who is stepping down from teaching conducting after building one of the most respected graduate programs in the country. His students have gone on to become assistant conductors of the New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia Orchestra, Pittsburgh Symphony, and Boston Symphony Orchestra, as well as music directors of ensembles such as the Knoxville Symphony and Ann Arbor Symphony.

While he concludes this chapter in the conducting studio, Hugh will remain a vital part of NEC’s musical community as Director of Orchestral Activities. We celebrate his remarkable legacy as a teacher and mentor—and look forward to the music still to come.
