Tuesday Night New Music was founded in the early 90s by Lee Hyla.
It is a student-run, faculty-supervised concert series that offers the opportunity to hear music by the next generation of composers:
current New England Conservatory composition students.
This year, the series is directed by Peter Butler and Genie Alvarado, under the supervision of composition chair Michael Gandolfi.

Ellsworth Mountain Pines

This piece for soprano and two pianos is based on Robinson Jeffers' poem of the same name. Jeffers, who was known best for his work on the central Californian coast, writes here of lonesome pines keeping watch over a desolate cliffside. His narrative and epic style of poetry spoke to me in this work, and throughout the darkness of his text, a glimmer of light and hope can be seen – something I worked to capture in my music.

– Oliver Ellsworth

In scornful upright loneliness they stand,
 Counting themselves no kin of anything
 Whether of earth or sky. Their gnarled roots cling
Like wasted fingers of a clutching hand
In the grim rock. A silent spectral band
 They watch the old sky, but hold no communing
 With aught. Only, when some lone eagle's wing
Flaps past above their grey and desolate land,
Or when the wind pants up a rough-hewn glen,
 Bending them down as with an age of thought,
 Or when, 'mid flying clouds that can not dull
Her constant light, the moon shines silver, then
 They find a soul, and their dim moan is wrought
 Into a singing sad and beautiful.

Crosson At the Piano

At the Piano is the first in a series of piano pieces called Lyric Tunes. For about a year, this piece had no title. Eventually, the piece was given its name because, to me, it brings to mind sitting at the piano and playing it for the enjoyment it brings.

Guan Intro: May the Moon be with Me, Forever + Selene

I said "the moon is beautiful tonight", but what I truly want to say is "I love you".

– Amelia Guan
